

History of Test Matches

Presents the

HISTORY
of
TEST MATCHES
1985 - 2023

Attached is the collection of results of test matches played between all FIT Members. The first unofficially test was played between Australian and New Zealand in 1976 in Auckland. The first official test was held at South Melbourne Cricket ground in 1985. These records trace the history not only of the Trans Tasman battles but the test series played in Asia, Europe and Pacific Regions.

On Saturday 12th November 1988, New Zealand scored what could only be described as a defeat for Australia, a nil all draw in the first game of the Mens Open division. The jubilation of the New Zealand players saw them phoning the results back home within minutes of the completion of the game.

But, it wasn't until Saturday 8th May 1993 that New Zealand scored its first test victory over Australia. Who can remember Australia leading two - nil, then New Zealand coming back to lead three - two when the hooter sounded. The wild scenes of triumph overshadowed what was still happening on the field. The ball had not gone dead and New Zealand's quick thinking saw them run the length of the field to record a fourth touchdown - A second conquest of Australia.

February 2013 saw a Super Test Series encompassing Youth, Open and Masters where New Zealand won the series for a second time. Of the Fifteen series played between the two countries, Australia have enjoyed success to the tune of thirteen to two. In 2016 the series was hosted by New Zealand who failed to win a match on home soil . Australia repeated the 9-0 whitewash the following year in Queensland thus proving their superior as does the All Blacks in Rugby.

The latter half of the second decade of this century has seen a surge in Test Matches between the countries of Europe as well as between Asian Countries, details of which are attached
