TEST
Caps

In sport, a cap is a metaphorical term for a player's appearance on a select team, such as a national team. The term dates from the practice in the United Kingdom of awarding a cap (an item of headgear) to every player in an international match of Association Football. In the early days of football, the concept of each team wearing a set of matching shirts had not been universally adopted, so each side would distinguish itself from the other by wearing a specific sort of cap.

That all players taking part for England in future international matches be presented with a white silk cap with red rose embroidered on the front, these were to be termed International Caps.

The act of awarding a cap is now international and is applied to other sports. Actual caps are not always given anymore, but the term "cap" for an international or other appearance has been retained. Thus, a cap is awarded for each game played and so a player who has played x games, for the team, is said to have been capped x times or have won x caps

Originally awarded only to players; the Sport of Touch has recognized coaches, assistants and managers as contributing greatly to the players efforts and as such are awarded caps. Other support staff such as Medical, Head Coach etc. are recognised as having represented their country in the year the Test was played but do not receive caps.

In respect of awarding of numbered caps Touch recognises only Men and Women Open players and attached is the list of players who have attained this honour.
