

Vale: Peter WILSON 19?? – 2004

January 2004 saw the tragic death of a good mate of the Hunter

Western Hornets Touch fraternity, particularly those on the Central Coast. Peter was killed in a car accident on the North Coast of NSW that month.

To many, 'Willow' was a good bloke. He was a great player who attended many tournaments and enjoyed socialising and having a good time. At his funeral however his team mates were shown a different side to the lovable larrikin.

He was a passionate sportsman and teacher. Most of his spare time was spent helping kids and young people and coaching touch teams who needed a helping hand. The time and effort he devoted to these pastimes was one of the reason Central Coast Touch produced so many fine players from within the School System.

Not only did his friends and team lose a good mate when he passed away, but Touch and New South Wales lost a great ambassador and citizen.
